appearance can be put down in part to the talents of nine-year-old Sydney schoolgirl Valentina Sykes. The daughter of Ten's wardrobe wizard Annebelle van Tongeren created a dazzling pair of drop earrings (long gold chain strands with amber stones, Czech crystals and gold leaves) to match the frock her mother made for Rowe to wear. Valentina has begun sharing her creativity during beading lessons with her after-school-care class at Forest Lodge, Glebe. The budding jeweller's work has already caught the eye of her classmates' mums, who have put in orders for her hand-crafted designs and in the process have helped raise money for the after-school program. For orders or inquiries, email Valentina at avantong@gmail.com.

Lessons in style

BEYOND the catwalk, fashion TV can make for great viewing: see tonight's premiere of The Entrepreneurs, a locally produced series on Foxtel's Biography Channel. Episode one features the inspiring stories of designer Jayson Brunsdon and accessories maven Amanda Briskin (pictured) of Mimco fame. Brunsdon reveals his plans to take on the world with his sophisticated creations, which have caught the eye of American investors and look likely to take him closer to his dream of turning over $20 million in the next five years. With just $5000 and a passion for shopping, Briskin has built up wealth estimated at $17 million. Not a bad effort for the little girl her family dubbed "Mimi" (hence her company's name), because she used to wander around the house saying "Me, me!" The series begins at 6.30pm today.
